

Self-reported grades / student expectations

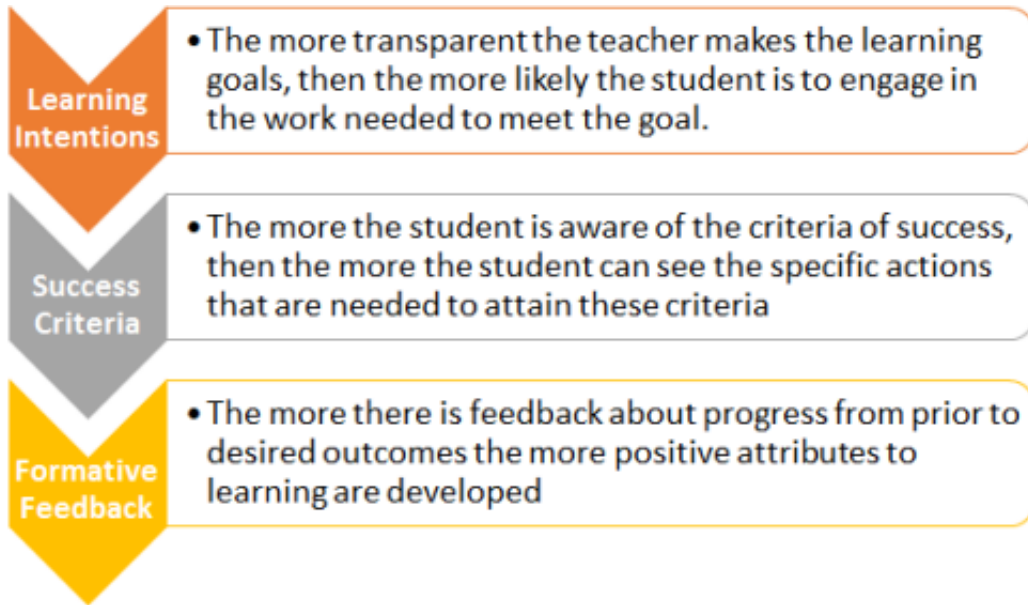

- Students are able to accurately assess their own work
- 'Expectations of success may become a barrier for some students as they may only perform to whatever expectations they already have of their ability.' (Hattie)
- Lower expectations reinforce student underachievement

What do successful teachers do?

"A successful teacher establishes a student's expectations of their abilities but then dispels those expectations by telling them they can do better. What a student achieved yesterday should never be okay tomorrow".

Practices that Support Self-Reported Grades

What Does a Learner Do?

1. Identifies the Learning Goal.
2. Makes a plan to achieve the goal.
3. Carries out the plan using multiple strategies and deliberate practice.
4. Observes his/her progress, efforts and thoughts during the process--makes changes when needed to learn well.
5. Uses "success criteria" to determine when the goal is met.
